About The Speaker

“Anyone who thinks ending war is naïve hasn’t put enough thought into it. What’s naïve is to think that war can continue and humanity will survive.” -- Paul Chappell, The Sun Magazine, April 2011

Paul K. Chappell is a former Army Captain, Iraq War veteran and West Point graduate who uses his military experience and research into human nature to help unravel the myths that perpetuate war. Chappell believes that man is not naturally violent, that war drives people insane and that peace is practical, possible and necessary. He has been awarded the 2011 Independent Publishers Book Award, the 2011 International Book Publishers Association Benjamin Franklin Foreign Affairs/Military Book Award and others.

His persuasive dialogue avoids blaming any particular political group and appeals to all political stripes. Son of a Korean mother and African-American father who served in Korea and Vietnam, Chappell now leads the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation.
